

JITNEYS MAY RUN IF BOND IS MADE

Judge Cole Holds That City Traffic Ordinance Is Legal

CITY'S POWER UPHELD

Car Operators Must Provide $2,500 Liability Bond and Get License

The second round of the fight between the city officials and the jitney drivers was decided yesterday by District Judge Redmond S. Cole in favor of the city, although it is a questionable victory. The first round of the battle, which started two months ago, was won by the jitney drivers when Judge Cole granted a restraining order enjoining the city from interfering with the operation of jitneys.

At the conclusion of the hearing yesterday Judge Cole refused to grant the temporary injunction asked by counsel for the jitney drivers and held the city ordinance, passed two weeks ago by the city commission, to be legal providing the city officials did not discriminate. The court warned against any discrimination, however. In refusing to grant a temporary injunction and holding the ordinance valid, Judge Cole ordered the restraining order to remain in effect until November 6, so as to give the jitney operators an opportunity to comply with the terms of the ordinance.

The ordinance, which was passed October 17, provides for a $2,500 liability bond and a city license. Counsel for the jitney drivers contended that if the jitney drivers meet these requirements the city officials would think up some other handicap to keep the jitneys off the streets. Judge Cole claimed that the purpose of the city officials was to drive the jitneys off the streets in favor of the buses which were put in operation several weeks ago.

Judge Cole pointed out that the city had the power to regulate its streets and that the present ordinance, reasonably interpreted, is, therefore, legal. The city, he stated, has had no chance to enforce the ordinance, as yet, and for that reason it is not known whether the officials will discriminate against the jitneys. He warned, however, that if the ordinance was enforced in a discriminatory manner and an effort made to force the jitneys from the streets unjustly, an injunction might be obtained.

E. J. Lundy and W. H. McFarlin, counsel for the jitney drivers, stated that their clients would make an attempt to furnish the required liability bonds and obtain city licenses, in order to test the good faith of the city. The city officials said that they would insist upon traffic for hire being conducted in a manner which would insure the safety and comfort of the public. Counsel for both the jitney drivers and the city indicated that they would appeal the matter to the supreme court if necessary to get a final decision.

MRS. HALL TELLS HOW SHE SPENT 'TRAGEDY' NIGHT

she had supper about 6:30 o'clock and afterwards went out on the porch. Later she played games with her niece until about 9 o'clock, when she put her niece to bed.

Shortly after 9 o'clock she came downstairs and sat in the library reading until 10:30 o'clock, she said. At 10:30 she said she went upstairs and went to bed but not to sleep. At 2:30 she arose and went to the church as she feared Doctor Hall might have fallen asleep while reading in his study. She said he frequently had fallen asleep over his book in the evening.

Asked Police Aid.

Returning to her home from the church, Mrs. Hall said she again read. When Doctor Hall had not returned at 7 o'clock in the morning, she called the police and asked if there had been any report of an accident.

Mrs. Hall said she did not tell the police who she was asking concerning any specific accident.

"What have you to say regarding the story told by Mrs. Gibson?" she was asked.

"What can I say?" she answered.

"Is it manifestly untrue?"

"Mrs. Hall" denied emphatically that she had ever been to the Phillips farm or that she received any telephone calls on the night of the slaying.

Regarding the letters that are alleged to have been written Mrs. Mills by Doctor Hall, she said:

"I think it is very unlikely that Doctor Hall ever wrote those letters."

No one, Mrs. Hall said, had ever carried any tales to her regarding Doctor Hall and Mrs. Mills.

"How do you feel towards Mrs. Mills in the light of the revelations contained in the letters?" a question was asked.

"I do not know what to say," Mrs. Hall replied.

"I have no idea who committed this crime," Mrs. Hall asserted. "I have no idea as to any motive for it nor anything else about it."

Asked if she knew of any information that would lead to the authorities, Mrs. Hall replied:

"I have no knowledge of any information that would help solve the crime or that would lead me to suspect anyone."

Rev. Hall Had No Enemies.

Mrs. Hall asserted that Doctor Hall never had an enemy. She also declared she knew of no papers belonging to him that are missing and said she had heard nothing regarding a watch belonging to her husband that is reported to have disappeared.

"I still believe in my husband," Mrs. Hall asserted.

Some very blunt questions were put to the clergyman's widow, but she did not lose her poise. The closest she came to it was once or twice when her voice broke.

"Were you ever jealous of Mrs. Mills or any other woman?" Mrs. Hall was asked.

A smile came into her tired, weary eyes as she replied:

"No, never was I jealous of Mrs. Mills or any other woman."

Asked if she had ever owned or fired a pistol, Mrs. Hall answered:

"No, I have never owned a pistol nor revolver, nor have I ever fired one."

Mrs. Hall was asked how she felt about the slaying of her husband.

"I was so stunned that I did not think at all," she replied earnestly. "She was able to think of the case," she said. "In fact, I have felt as though I were up against a blank wall," she added.

Mrs. Hall said she bore no ill-feeling against anyone.

Asked why she had not offered a reward for the apprehension of the murderer or murderers, Mrs. Hall said she felt that the authorities were doing all they possibly could toward solving the mystery.

When her attention was called to the indignation and suspicions that have followed the slaying of Mrs. Gibson, Mrs. Hall murmured:

"It is most mysterious that people should think that of me."

She added in a stronger voice:

"Of course, I wonder the murderer or murderers apprehended. I think that any person who has committed a murder should be apprehended. Such a person is not safe to be at large."

Mrs. Hall delivered this opinion firmly, but quietly.

The interview took place in the Hall library and for an hour the widow faced a battery of questions, calmly accepting all. She took her time to make her replies and spoke in a quiet conversational tone of voice. She seemed to be more calm than some of the reporters.

Mrs. Hall was dressed in a blue gown and her gray hair was combed back plainly from the forehead. Her face was lined with grief and worry and her friends said that her hair had visibly whitened since the tragedy took place.

Known He Wrote Letters.

Although Mrs. Hall declared she did not believe her husband wrote the letters found beside his body, she admitted she knew Doctor Hall had written letters last summer to Mrs. Mills. Asked how she knew Doctor Hall had written Mrs. Mills, she said:

"Because he was sending cards to all his parish. Mrs. Mills wrote to me and said he had sent her cards. He spoke of it."

"Did you know that he had received a letter or letters from her?"

"I knew of two, that is all."

"Do you know what the contents of those letters were?"

"Yes, I did."

"Were there any terms of affection or familiarity in those letters?"

"None whatever."

"Why is it, Mrs. Hall, that you say you have doubts as to the letters and diary being authentic?"

"Because it seems so unlikely that Mr. Hall would write such things from what I knew of him."

MUST SWEEP MILE OF ROAD

Three Little Rock, Ark., Boys Who Scattered Tacks to Remove Them.

Special to The World.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 1.—Edward Reynolds, Raymond Goddard and Morris Hogg, Little Rock high school students, will be required to rake and sweep clear of tacks nearly a mile of the highway between Little Rock and Pine Bluff, to make good grades for the school year and get excellent conduct certificates, if they are to escape a sentence of 30 days in jail and pay fines of $100 each.

The boys pleaded guilty to scattering tacks along the roadway leading to this city, just prior to the Pine Bluff-Little Rock high school football game here last week. As a result many motor cars on the way to Little Rock to participate in a parade, either slipped into the city on flat tires or were abandoned because of punctures.

Hijacker Identified By Victim—Pair Got $200 From Pipeliners

RAMONA, Nov. 1.—One of the two masked men who held up five Prairie Pipe Line workmen last Friday while they were in a poker game at the Raymond Gordon place east of the railroad, is a well-known Ramona man, according to one of the players, who says that the mask fell from his face, and that while he does not know the name of the bandit he knows his face well.

It is also claimed that the hijackers arrived at the Gordon place in a Marmon car owned by a well-known Ramona man. The bandits got $200 in money. They lined their clothing up faces against the wall, and took their cash out of their pockets. One player named McCure, who was not as agile as the bandits requested, was shot through the trousers by the bullet grazing the flesh. This player's unconsciousness was occasioned no doubt by the fact that he had $90 which the robbers took.

EDISON 'TOO BUSY TO TALK'

Wizard Reported Dead Just Laughs at the Humor.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Nov. 1.—

Thomas A. Edison, electrical wizard, has not talked over the telephone for 25 years.

His hearing is bad. His secretary made this known today when he spoke for Edison in denying reports that the aged inventor was dead.

Asked if he had told Edison of the reports, the secretary replied in the affirmative and said that his employer only smiled and said he was too busy to talk.
